

SPREADING JESUS' HEALING TOUCH

Early Adventist church members felt called by God to share His message of wholeness to the world. Their conviction came from the Bible's account of Jesus "who went about doing good" (Acts 10:38). In 1866, Adventists began moving across the country to establish Sanitariums—places for people to become well. Today, nearly 80 Adventist hospitals—still true to this conviction—extend the healing ministry of Christ to communities across the U.S.
